Dear Commissioners,
I certainly hope the Regulatory Commission of Alaska will look very, very closely at AEL&P's enormous rate increase request. An increase that according to all intuition, reason and common sense is way too much and appears to provide AEL&P, a private corporation, with excess revenue in their bank account.
Thank you for your careful attention to this very serious matter.

Hi,

I live in a remote community in Alaska. My nearest town is Ketchikan. I can only get there by float plane. There are no roads that connect my community to Ketchikan or Ketchikan to the rest of North America. I am an avid outdoorsman and hunter. I reload most of my own ammunition. My guns are not only used for hunting but in defense of life and property. We have a very large bear population here. This has become a very difficult practice for me. There are no stores where I live. I have to charter a $900.00 round trip float plane to town to buy powder. When I get to town there is only one place to buy smokeless gun powder. They don't stock much powder and what they do have is not what I want. Due to unfair shipping laws I can not mail order powder. It is legal to mail order powder in 48 of the 50 states, but as with most other things Alaskans are treated like second rate citizens. I feel that this is an infringement of my second amendment rights. What can be done about t his?

Senator Lyman Hoffman
Representative Bryce Hoffman
Alaska Legislature
Juneau, Alaska 99811

Re: Energy Disaster Declaration for our Villages

Dear Senator Lyman Hoffman and Representative Edgmon:

The comment below is one I sent to the Juneau Empire on comments about 17 officials mulling over the Juneau "energy crisis". You both know that many or your villages have been paying what Juneau is paying now that their low-cost hydro has been temporarily wiped out by an avalanche. I fully support helping Juneau as long as all of our villages get the same consideration.

Our energy disaster has been gradual and not a sudden event like an avalanche that wakes everybody up. Ours has been eroding our pocketbooks and destroying our villages for over 7 years.

We all appreciate all of the work you did on energy weatherization, alternative energy funding, new energy money for our schools, fully funding PCE, and revenue sharing for our villages. This is commendable.

However, all of those programs won't help our people who are struggling to pay for electricity, heating fuel, gasoline to go hunting, and propane PLUS find money for food for their families.

We need to build an energy relief bridge to get us from where we are now to whatever is going to lower our cost of energy in the future. The only way to give us IMMEDIATE relief is a fuel subsidy and a state sales tax waiver program that reimburses communities that waive the tax on electricity and fuel.

IF the state is going to take action for Juneau then you must insist that they do the same for all of our villages across Alaska that have been in an energy disaster condition for over 7 years. However the Governor's decision goes, I beg you to push for expanding the upcoming special session to include our villages to get the help they need or ask the Legislature to call itself into session to address this issue. Since the Legislature is the Assembly for the Unorganized Borough, it would be appropriate for the Legislature to call itself into session to take care of our immediate needs.

We beg and pray that you will do the following for us:

- Urge the Governor to declare an energy disaster for all of our villages across the state of Alaska and/or include that issue in the upcoming special session.
- Ask the Legislative Leadership to call a special session to meet Alaska's Immediate Energy Needs
- Support giving Mr. Haagenson, Energy Coordinator, cabinet level status and convert the AEA to the Dept. of Energy
- Develop legislation that will create an Alaska Fuel Subsidy that will take our Alaska Royalty Oil and have it refined at Flint Hills or Nikiski and have heating fuel, gasoline, diesel, aviation fuel, and propane delivered to all of communities in Alaska at no more than $3.00 a gallon at the pump.
- Craft legislation that will reimburse all communities that waive all sales taxes on electricity and fuel.
- Push our Congressional delegation to adopt a moratorium on all fuel taxes.

My best personal regards,

Nels Anderson, Jr.

Attachment: My comment on the Juneau Empire story on Governor Mulling Energy Disaster after avalanche

"As the govenor mulls over Juneau being declared a disaster due to the intervention of Mother Nature wiping out a power line, most of the villages of Alaska have been suffering extreme hardship due to excessively high electricity, heating fuel, gasoline, diesel, and propane costs for seven years. This all leads to high transportation costs that raise the cost of food, subsistence hunting and fishing, commercial fishing, and places a terrible strain on families that are finding it extremely difficult to pay for energy and food for the family.
Believe me, I am in total agreement with a decision to declare the Juneau area a disaster as long as our villages are given the same consideration and declared energy disaster areas as well.
We have a broken energy system that is not helping all of us equally. That has to stop by getting our Alaska State Royalty Oil refined at Flint Hills or Nikiski and have the gasoline, diesel, heating fuel, and propane sold to us at no more than $3.00 a gallon. We also need the state to create an energy sales tax waiver program that reimburses communites that have a sales tax.
And finally, we need Mr. Steve Haagenson to be given cabinet level powers to head a new Dept. of Energy which is now the Alaska Energy Authority.

We need help in our villages just as Juneau does. We cannot ignore that fact any more."

Juneau's power situation. Almost everyone I know is taking quite extensive measures to save/conserve. Regardless, many of us live in all electric housing situations. Many of us don't have a lot of expendable income. The argument that others are using not to help us out is........."Get used to it, many other places in Alaska already pay high electric bills!"......problem is, this is a small natural disaster and not a foreseen item to budget for, this is not something we have built into our income/expenditure models!

Please support Juneau residents in finding some relief to the expected high costs over the next several months. Juneau isn't immune to economic troubles and rising costs, not to mention small disasters.

Good afternoon, Governor Palin! My name's Garrett, and I'm an international relations master's student at LSU. I actually identify myself as a pro-life libertarian, but I have been very impressed with your work in Alaska. I actually intended to write you a letter, but knowing you are very busy I assumed you would appreciate brevity.

The reason I'm writing to you today is I had heard (via the Rush Limbaugh show) that you were on a list of possible VP candidates. Although it's possible the list he provided was mere speculation, I hope that, if it is true, that you would consider running alongside Sen. McCain. The current shortlist that I have seen, naturally, has focused on governors or senators from strategic states which will possibly be battlegrounds for the November election. However, I believe your success (as well as popularity) in Alaska will show to be invaluable during the election season.

Although I am ideologically a libertarian, I do typically vote Republican, as I'm sure my concern over the 2008 Presidential election has shown. I fear the type of socialist Supreme Court Justices we would see nominated under the leadership of a borderline socialist like Sen. Obama or an egomaniac like Sen. Clinton. I do think you are the best choice for Vice President and I urge you to consider should Sen. McCain approach you. Thank you for your time and your consideration. I do hope you consider blessing the rest of the United States with the talent God has given you and shown in your work as Governor of the Great State of Alaska.

Garrett Heckman

Dear Governor Palin,

I hope you can find it in your busy schedule to read this email. I heard about your inspiring story regarding your child. I wanted to bring to your attention an organization that works with Down Syndrome children who have made a difference in the lives of thousands of these children and their families. I have seen with my own eyes the incredible achievements these children have made with the help of the staff at the Institutes for the Achievement of Human Potential, a international non-profit founded by Glenn Doman.

As you probably know, Down Syndrome children are far more intelligent than the world makes them out to be. This organization has know this and taught this for the last 55 years. These children have the capacity to make great gains that the world never suspected were possible.

Again, I hope you can find time to visit this link,

Or better yet, read Glenn Doman's book "What to do About Your Brain-Injured child". The information in this book has created a better quality of life for many children, and when I heard your story I thought this would be right for you.

I wish you and your family all the best and congratulations on the arrival of your son.

I just wanted to congratulate Governor Palin on the birth of her new son, Trig. I am the mother of a 23 year old son with Down Syndrome. Jeremy is a joy and a blessing in our lives. My husband calls him his "hero". He loves the Lord with such a pure love that challenges his parents all the time. He knows Scripture like you wouldn't believe and can pull out and quote a verse in ways that put us to shame. We need to study more.

Jeremy is working almost full time and living in a house with two other young men. He is self-supportive and doing great. Our philosophy when raising him was that he would be treated no different than our other children and would be given the same opportunities to grow that they had. I believe we all have benefitted by that.

Enjoy your beautiful son. He will bring so much joy to your hearts.

Thank you for all you do to protect families.

Dear Gov. Palin,

Congratulations on the birth of your precious baby boy Trig! You ARE indeed blessed!

I have a 9-yr-old daughter with Down syndrome named Sadie. She is an absolute joy! You will find out in time (if not already) that Trig will be one of the greatest blessings of your life. There is truly something very special about children (and adults) with Down syndrome. You will know exactly what I mean. Only a parent of a child with Down syndrome can understand this special love.

I hope your little boy is healthy. My Sadie did have a heart defect and had heart surgery at the age of 3-1/2 months. She did very well though, and she has been a very healthy girl ever since.

I thank you for being such a public witness to life! Sadie's birth is what brought me into the pro-life cause, and I am now very active in this endeavor. You sound like a wonderful governor. I am so pleased to hear of a governor being so pro-life.

You sound like the kind of person who will adjust just fine, but if you ever feel the need to contact other mothers with Down syndrome, please feel free to contact me. God bless!

Sincerely,

Eileen Haupt

Jericho, Vermont

p.s.....I just thought of something....I had e-mailed a mom of a child with DS who has a blog about DS, about marching in the 2009 March for Life in Washington and trying to gather a group of families of children with Down syndrome to march to raise awareness of the high abortion rate of babies with DS. Would this be something you'd be interested in?

Someday I'd love to talk with you about this challenge, mother to mother. As a busy public servant, this may not be possible, but God may allow it.

If nothing else, I want to tell you about a wonderful program that will help your child. Please visit the website of the National Association for Child Development (www.nacd.org). These wonderful people have the very highest expectations for children with Down syndrome. The founder of NACD, Robert J. Doman Jr., is probably the foremost expert on the education of children with DS in the country. Children with DS who are taught with NACD's approach are in excelling. They graduate with real diplomas and go to college.

Do check them out.

God bless you. And congratulations.

My comment is but a small simple one. With humbleness I thank the Lord for the priviledge of reading articles from the Family Research Council about Governor Palin having their fifth child. And yes, Trig is not the last Blessing The Lord will bestow upon the Palin family. Senator clinton and Speaker peloski are poor examples of women in high places, but I would gladly and proudly vote for Palin if she would ever consider running for the highest office in the land. I Praise the Lord and thank the Lord for people like Palin. I know everyone doesn't always agree on everything, but the people/residents of Alaska should be happy and proud to have a Governor such as Palin.

Thanks for your time.......

I just read an article about the birth of your 5th child and was very impressed with your opinion about abortion.

My daughter is the mother of a beautiful 16 year old daughter named Sarah. She has been a joy and blessing in all of our lives.

Never underestimate their possibilities. Sarah is in the 9th grade and she will be graduating from high school in three more years. Sarah has always been mainstremed in school and it has proved to be a positive experience. In the younger grades it was difficult for her because the other children did not always understand but now these same kids have matured and they love and appreciate Sarah. She is the princess of the class. She is even invited to sleep overs by her classmates. She runs track, downhill skiis, and swims like a fish. She is amazing.

I felt compelled to write this note to you as an encouragement from a grandmother who watched her 21 year old daughter give birth to a down syndrome child and say to me the next morning "Mom I know what we have to do! We have to help this child to develop to her fullest potential" and her and her husband set out to do just that and the results have been wonderful. Difficult at time but wonderful.

God bless you and your family,

Mary Jane Balcom

MESSAGE:

Dear Mrs. Palin:

Congratulations on the birth of your precious son, Trig. As a mother of an 18-month-old darling with Down Syndrome, I can testify to the "unspeakable joy" of raising a child with designer genes. That extra 21st chromosome is the love chromosome, as my pediatrician says, and it's true. My Noah is also my fifth child and second son, and he has been a blessing to our family from day one. And the blessing is just more apparent every day. He has brought out the best in my children and in my husband and me. We are all much more affectionate, loving, and just plain happy since Noah has come along. Why? I think it's because we, as human beings, tend to give what we get, and those wonderful things are what we get from Noah. Your son will probably have an extra chromosome worth of love and happiness to share. Enjoy him.

I don't know if Trig is facing any medical issues. I pray he is healthy. While medical issues are common, my experience with Noah has been it is not a for-sure thing. My Noah had a small VSD which closed on its own with no need for intervention. No other medical problems, so be not afraid. He has not even had to have antibiotics, not even an ear infection. He was a difficult nurser, but we pushed through and he did fine with a little extra effort.

Occupational therapy and joining a Yahoo group for parenting children with Down syndrome have been my greatest helps. I typically don't mess with Yahoo groups, but I can't say this loud enough - it's the parents who have the answers, not the doctors. Doctors know what they have been told or read, parents know from experience.

I know this sounds rediculous, but if there is anything I can do, please feel free to contact me. I know it helped me to talk to another mom of a child with Down syndrome. You are very blessed to be Trig's mom.

Sincerely,

Alyson Dunn

Dear Gov. Palin,

Our thoughts and prayers are with you on the birth of your son. We also have a Down Syndrome son, Jacob, born when I was 44. He will have his 21st birthday this summer and has been a joy and a blessing (and also a lot of intense work and, certainly, some tears) in our family. He has 8 brothers and sisters to whom he has been an inspiration.

Jacob reads the Scriptures by himself, serves as a part-time volunteer at the Bishop's Storehouse, a food bank-type operation where he fills orders, carries them out for clients, works in the kitchen, and in the warehouse. He loves music, bowling, camping, playing learning games on the computer, reading and playing pool. He has never met a person he didn't love--and most of them love him back.

He had certain health challenges that we were blessed to find help for and he is now one of the healthiest DS children in America, I do believe. We worked with Bob Doman of the NACD to design a program to help him achieve his potential, and I'd recommend the NACD to anyone with a special needs child. They empower families to help their children.

God bless you and your family for choosing life for this special boy--I won't tell you things won't sometimes be hard, but I can tell you they will be worth it.

Thank you for your fortitude in fighting for the rights of unborn children. Thank you especially for the example you've set for those who might hesitate to bring to life a child with special needs. God has greatly blessed you with your son Trig. Babies are such a wonderful gift. They are an example of God's great love for us and of His trust in us to raise those children according to His word.

When I was young I was very selfish, thinking only of myself. I was single and, I thought, an independent woman. I made the horrible mistake of having an abortion. At the time it didn't bother me. I know, this is just awful, and now I live with the regret and the guilt. I know God has forgiven me but I just can't stop thinking about my choice. I'm thankful for people like you who fight for this precious life and greatful you've chosen to share your experience. God truly has a gentle soldier fighting for Him and His creation.

I just heard from my daily Family Research Council email that God continues to richly bless you and Todd in your receiving His love gift of priceless Trig with his special challenges but vastly greater special blessings that kids without Downs syndrome usually lack, such as (what I know from professional personal interaction) the tremendous affection and great trust that usually makes so-called "normal" people look exceedingly morose and untrustworthy by comparison.

As you know far better than I, Anthony and Stanton and their fellows would have rejected as evil monsters not fit to be women most of today's phony so-called "feminists" getting the media attention (http://www.feministsforlife.org/history/index.htm) insanely obsessed with butchering these fabulous treasures, of which one alone outweighs all the world's gold and jewels in value, though nonetheless stemming from the priceless divine union God gave you and Todd and thus necessarily subservient to it, keeping kids in their proper place UNDER the parental order likewise UNDER the divine order as our Founding Fathers and their "one Christian nation under God" understood before most of today's mindless and lawless fascist "authorities" in most of all three branches of government sought to trash it all.

One thing I was sad to hear you have been deceived by (tell a lie often enough and people will believe anything, as with the NYT's Durante deceiving the entire Western world into thinking Stalin was such a nice guy until Muggeridge eventually exposed him after massive rejection of the truth by most) is the similarly ubiquitous, practically universal, lawless and fascist "gay" lie propaganda that has enslaved the country and even the world (as Hitler did: The Pink Swastika (www.abidingtruth.com/pfrc/books/pinkswastika/html/the_pinkswastika_ 4th_edition_-_final.htm) as badly as the lie of the equally lawless and fascist antiChristian bigotry religion of evolution pretending to be science.

For the exposure of the "gay" propaganda lie and its certain destruction of civilization unless successfully opposed, see "The 'gay' invention" at

Subject: Alaska Energy Crisis

Dear Governor Palin,
This is an article that is in today's Anchorage paper regarding the energy crisis we are facing.
http://www.adn.com/opinion/compass/story/386349.html
I am asking the help of the Governors office and the legislature in moving forward HB 288 regarding Net Metering. Thousands of Alaskans are willing to make the substantial invest in alternative energy to help reduce our oil consumption but we need a net metering law to make it cost feasible. I ask you, why is Alaska one of only a handful of states that does not have metering?

It would be a tremendous boost to alternative energy if the legislature was to pass HB 288 during the upcoming special session. Doing so would bring a tremendous surge in installation of alternative energy systems this construction season before next winter.

Thank you for your time and your consideration of helping all Alaskans to reduce our dependency on oil.

Sincerely,
Dan Klaes
Mayor
City of Bettles

Hi Ms. Goto, thank you for your thoughts and suggestion. Thank you for your support of my hometown in our time of need. We in Juneau have stood with our more rural neighbors on energy issues, and I appreciate your concerns. I hope that we can work together for a good resolution for ALL Alaska.

I know you and your family and friends have long suffered from tremendous fuel and energy prices. I know we have to resolve this issue and we have to do it soon.

I have asked for a declaration of disaster for Juneau because of the many seniors, disabled, single parents, small businesses and others who are on fixed incomes and who will not make it through a big increase in energy costs. I know other people in Alaska are also suffering. We are truly all in this together.

Thank you for your email, I appreciate it and hope that we can all see a turn around in energy in Alaska.
All my best, Beth

Re: Energy Crisis in Rural Alaska

Dear Governor Palin, Senator Davis and Representative Cissna:

Along with Juneau, please consider declaring all Alaska villages "Energy Disaster Areas." There is no relief in sight and the next fuel barges will deliver even more expensive fuel. I moved to Anchorage in 2002 but I still keep a close pulse on what happens at home. In my region, my family and friends are expecting some very steep prices of fuel and continued high prices for electricity. The average price of heating fuel in my home region is $4.63 and the highest price paid is $7.75. Please also note that ISER reports that rural Alaska uses less energy, but pays more (Effects of Rising Utility Costs on Household Budgets, ISER, March 2007).

Rural Alaska has been asking for energy relief for many years and as far as I know, the state disaster cabinet has never assembled on behalf of the villages that are facing increasingly increasing electricity and fuel costs. I hope that Juneau gets some relief, but I do not believe it is fair to consider Juneau to the exclusion of Rural Alaska villages where they are losing population, their schools are closing, no new jobs are being created, and villages are shutting down basic education, life, health, and public safety functions. High energy prices stymie economies and economic development. Just look at the airline industry.

The villages are going over an energy cliff and only massive intervention can turn the tide. Please consider a moratorium on energy sales taxes and a state-wide fuel subsidy program to lower the cost of gasoline, heating fuel, diesel, aviation fuel, and propane. This could work for and apply to all of Alaska.

The PCE program helps a lot with electricity and I thank you for your work on building the endowment and continuing to fund the program. Without that, instead of only paying 3 to 5 times as much for electricity as compared to Anchorage, my friends and family would be paying 3 to about 8 times as much.

This is a request to support communities' efforts to help themselves. You may be aware of the fact that many communities and regions (Pilot Point, Interior villages, Petersburg, Pt. Graham, Craig, Chena Hot Springs, and others) are taking pro-active steps to solve the energy problem on a long term basis but time is needed for their longer term solutions to kick in.

The experts warn that the energy situation in Anchorage and the rest of the Railbelt will soon be in the same set of terrible circumstances that Rural Alaska has been facing for 10s of years. My energy bills are creeping upward with no relief in sight. I truly believe we need to work together to solve this energy crisis for the benefit of the whole state. I hope that you will look kindly on this request for help and declare an energy crisis for Rural Alaska. Short of that, please create tools to stabilize the costs of energy to allow long term solutions to kick in.

Sincerely yours,

Greta L. Goto

Dear the Governor Palin,

My name is Stephanie Fraser. I am sixteen and I go to Robert Service High School. My history teacher has had us research a current events issue for a research paper and I chose the issue with polar bears. The issue keeps being pushed off and there still has not been a solution for the polar bears. One should be made as soon as possible, if it is, we can start to make the polar bears habitat a better place for them to live in.

The decision for whether the polar bears are going to be placed on the Endangered Species List or not has been put off too many times. A decision needs to be made. I think that the polar bears should be listed as threatened. The habitat in which the polar bears reside, is melting because of global warming. The polar bears live on the ice, and when the ice melts, they have to try and swim to the land. Polar bears can only swim so far, if they have to go too far because there is not another piece of ice, or any land, they have a chance of drowning.

I realize that this is more of an issue to deal with global warming, but if we are not going to do anything to stop harming the environment that the polar bears live in, then they should be placed on the Endangered Species List. They are in danger and we are to blame. The polar bears should be protected unless we do something to stop contributing to the global warming that is ruining the polar bear habitat. The polar bears will not adapt to living on land either, the animals they eat do not live on the land, they live in the oceans.

The polar bears need to be protected from our carelessness. So unless, we are going to clean up the environment and keep it clean, and do other things to keep the global warming from continuing at the pace it is at, then the polar bears should be protected under the Endangered Species List.

You don't very often hear of too many people in prominent positions with children with DS, so maybe God chose you to make a difference, and bring much needed attention to this disorder! I'm sure you have done your research and found that organizations trying to research solutions to some of the problems that people with Down's have are extremely underfunded. Deb Behr thinks Gara and French are in a hurry because the legislative leadership may be preparing to poll its members about calling a special session and they would be preparing arguments about why it should not happen. It is speculation but plausible.

Geez- that is demanding. Thanks for doing what you can on it, though it sounds like an impossible task at this point. Hopefully they'll take it out on Lyda, not us, if they're trying to make a point re: expensive litigation that resulted in no law changes.

Dear Governor Palin,

Apparently Rep. Gara and Sen. French are demanding that my dept. give the total of dollars spent in the last thirty years on abortion litigation by the state by noon tomorrow. We may or may not have an answer as it is not clear we have a method of compiling that material that far back especially on such short notice. I do not know the urgency other than they must anticipate it will become the topic of a special session after all. This is just a heads up in case you know more or even if you have not heard about it. Talis

Congratulations on the birth of your son. I to have a child with Downs, he is the youngest of 4 and the only boy. Similar to you we were unaware of this until two weeks after his birth when he was readmitted to the hospital and tested. His features are not very pronounced. Although we run into daily challenges they are fairly typical of the challenges our other children have gone thru. He will be 4 in July and currently plays t-ball and soccer. He is enrolled in an early learning program to prepare him for mainstream kindergarten and rides a bus from school to his daycare program which is the same as his sisters went. We felt lucky and blessed that god would trust us to raise such a special child

My wife and I are lucky enough to have executive positions in the healthcare field. This affords us the ability to seek answers to any questions we may have and ensure no barriers exist for Michael to receive the appropriate therapy allowing him to reach his fullist potential.

He is truly a blessing for us everyday and helps us to focus and understand what is truly important in our lives.

I encourage you to reach out to others who have children with downs so you can understand the resources available to you.

The Best of Luck

Governor Palin,

Congratulations on the birth of Trig! As a mom of a baby boy, Cole, born with Down syndrome a year ago tomorrow, I can testify that I believe I have only seen a glimpse of the positive impact he will have on my family's lives as well as this world.

I am good friends with Sean Parnell from the days when we served on a Western States Legislative Forestry Task Force together. I sent him an e-mail as soon as I heard the news that Trig had been born with Down syndrome. The hardest part is hearing the news and getting your arms around a new reality. However, you quickly develop new hopes and dreams for your son.

If over the next few days or weeks, you would like to talk, I would welcome it or if you come to DC, let me know, I would enjoy meeting you.

God Bless You and your family!

I am moved to write you a personal note this morning, having received an email through a pro-life organization sharing news of your expanded family. The email said Trig weighed in at 6 pounds 2 ounces, and because (according to my mom) that was my birth weight (closing in on 49 years ago), I immediately felt a kinship with your new baby boy. The email also explained that Trig has Down Syndrome, and expressed your joyous response and your thanks to God for entrusting you with the responsibility of caring for him. Your attitude humbled me and filled me with joy, reminding me that my challenges are small and that I can meet them. Congratulations and best wishes to you and your family.

Congratulations on your new baby!!

I, too, have five children, and my fifth child has Down syndrome. At first, my husband and I went through the gamut of emotions, but the whole time we knew this child, as with all children, is a gift from God. And what a joy he is! We feel not just blessed, but LUCKY to have a child with Down syndrome. I share my joy with you in welcoming your baby into your family!

I also want to introduce you to three internet lists that I have found most beneficial in providing me with much-needed information, research, and support in the world of Down syndrome. They are:

1) http://www.einstein-syndrome.com - I love Miriam's (the founder) positive attitude in the way she sees her child with DS. Also, most of the members on this list believe in more natural, healthier methods of caring for our special-needs child, because we've learned there are, at times, safer alternatives to surgery and/or drugs (which usually come with unpleasant side-effects), but we are open to these interventions if necessary.

2) http://groups.yahoo.com/group/DSTNI - This group uniformly believes in the benefits of Targeted Nutritional Intervention (TNI), a supplemental program that targets the unique differences created in our children due to that extra chromosome. I personally use and see good results with Nutrivene-D (http://nutrivene.com) in my son. Rob at Nutrivene has a daughter with DS.

3) http://groups.yahoo.com/group/DownSyndromeInfoExchange - another group of parents sharing vital information and research.

If you wish to join these sites to benefit from the knowledge, but prefer to remain anonymous, that is fine. Of course, we'd love for you to introduce yourself and your child. We all have knowledge, ideas, and experience we can share with each other.

Governor Palin, I'm so happy for you and your new baby, and I'm very proud of you for setting this wonderful pro-life example to our nation and hopefully to the world!

With warmest congrats!

Regina Karl

Alaska's Youngest Governor
Sarah Palin '87 is a rising star. She was featured in a Newsweek article about women in state government and interviewed on Charlie Rose's national PBS program. She is mentioned as possible candidate for Congress and there's even a Web site promoting her for vice president in 2008.
The youngest governor in Alaska's history and the first born since statehood, Palin is a 1987 graduate of the University of Idaho.
Combining her curiosity with her love of writing, she decided to pursue a degree in journalism. "I was always asking everyone the questions, and I still am today," Palin says.
Palin first got into politics running for city council in Wasilla, Alaska. Palin says her youth was more of an issue to voters than her gender, but that didn't stop her from running for mayor of Wasilla and winning when she was only 32.
"We accomplished a lot in the fastest growing area of the state, we reduced a bunch of taxes," Palin says. "Our agenda worked."
In early 2006, Palin sensed dissatisfaction with some of Alaska's long-time political figures and decided to run for governor.
"Knowing that former Governor Frank Murkowski's term was about to end, and seeing that it was the same old people wanting to run, I said to myself, 'Let's get way out there and take a stand for things that weren't right and had to be changed.' Picture taken by Jennifer Castro.
As governor, Palin has two major goals: restoring Alaska's reputation after a series of political scandals and making the state less reliant on federal funding. "I feel like that is a reason that we are here – to show that we can be trustworthy, and we can run a clean government which will allow us to convince the rest of the nation that we are capable of being responsible resource developers to supply the U.S."

With five offices located across Alaska, Palin is constantly traveling while trying to send as much time as possible with her husband and four children.
Palin's approval rating among voters hovers between 80 and 90 percent. Some Alaskans have suggested her as a candidate for U.S. Senate or for Alaska's single seat in the House of Representatives. Palin's father, Chuck Heath, says his daughter isn't interested in higher office – for now. "She's here to stay," he says. "Her honesty has gotten her through everything in her political career, and we're proud of the effects her honesty has had on the state."
Author: Jennifer Castro, Senior in radio-television-digital media.

Dear Governor Palin,

I was listening to the radio yesterday and heard a news blip that "the Governor of Alaska just had a baby with down syndrome."

I just wanted to write to you because I also have a little boy with down syndrome. I remember when we found out that Jake would have downs. Several friends talked about having an abortion, or tried to convince me that he wouldn't have a very good quality of life. At first it was like mourning the death of a "normal" child, but the minute he was born we knew he was so perfect, just the way he is, and we wouldn't change a thing. He has such a sweet and loving spirit, and he has introduced us to a different kind of world that we never would have known, meeting other parents with downs kids, etc.

Anyway, I just wanted to say congratulations on your beautiful baby boy. It sounds like he is going to be loved and wanted, and your life is going to be a crazy adventure with him, so good luck, and keep up all your good work.

You not only made a statement in giving birth to a mentally handicapped son, knowing that there would be challenges, but you've also made a statement in the fact that he is number five! In today's society, so many think two children is too many. As Christians, it is our privilege and responsibility to "be fruitful and multiply". If we don't, there will soon be very few to govern tomorrow. Larger families are a blessing and a testimony of what God can do! Thank you for standing!

Thanks so much for being a leader of Integrity, Principles and Priorities that have allowed you to not only be the Gov. of Alaska, but more importantly, a wife and mother. Thanks for your public service, but more importantly, for your public example and thanks to your husband for his role in all of this as well as your precious children, all 5 of them!

As the director of 2 non-profits that deal with healthy relationships and sexuality (one a govt. funded character based Abstinence and Healthy Relationship program and one a ministry that separately deals with the same issues), I want to just encourage you, your husband and family in taking the courageous and right stand with regard to the priorities of Life, marriage, family and calling (public service in your case).

I will certainly be praying for you as my sister was born with hydroencphalytis and the "burden" that she was, and has been, to our family over her 43 years have truly been a tremendous blessing!

Thanks again for your stance and true servant leadership and please let me know if there is anything that we can be praying for in particular and if our program and/or ministry can be of use to you in any other way.

God bless in Christ!

In His service

Hello Governor,

I have not met Ms. Kozloff, but she is in error about our request and our budget. We gained this year (FY09) like no other time. 40 additional Correctional Officers and programs. I'm heading to Juneau this afternoon and I'll get with Randy and talk this over. Heck, I'd meet with her. I've done that before and it worked out well. A cup of coffee is cheap. they started running an ad this morning about a magician and my removal of the word "Emergency" from our count sheets. Geez.

Thank you so much for your support, and Todd's calls have been a God send also.

I tried responding to this constituent, Ms. Kozloff, and she's obviously not in a mood to hear from me or Randy... do you know her or anything abouiut her - why she may be so angry? Don't spend time looking into it, just wondered if you knew her.

Governor:

Ms. Kozloff sounds pretty emotional. I will have operating budget numbers on several increments we supported for DPS and DOC from Mary Sutton at OMB tomorrow and would like to send that information to Ms. Kozloff. She is certainly entitled to her opinion, but she should be forming that opinion on the true facts about the budget.

I will also work on a response about the situation with Commissioner Schmidt. I believe that for at least the last month Joe has had a standing offer to sit down with the union and work together to resolve the issues. I think the union refused to meet with Joe and resolve any issues because that would not have fit well with the way they were portraying Joe to members or helped steer their no-confidence vote the way they wanted. These guys were trying to bully Joe and us. I will add a few sentences that the Commissioner continues to wait for the union to come to the table and get to work on the issues.

Several individuals like former DOC Commissioner Margaret Pugh who know how this union operates and who know him have written in support. We received another e-mail of support yesterday from a former Director of Institutions who worked with Joe and retired from DOC in 1998.

Governor,

I will respond to this and then I won't be writing again.

My email to you was entitled CORRECTIONS and had to do with your unconditional support of your friend, Joe Schmidt. Your response addresses the DPA budget.

I won't respond as to the DPS budget numbers or Corrections for that matter. My email was clearly ALL about your response and how bad it looks. You know that. Your response, or lack thereof, only showed me that what everyone is now talking about is exactly true. You don't care what the residents of this State think. You don't care what the employees of the State think or feel. It's all about you and your friends. I am so disappointed.

Governor Palin,

I have long supported you and have absolutely been in love with how you conduct yourself and conduct business for our State. I have been behind your husband in his desire to go back to the Slope, stating it's no one's business but yours and his. I have applauded you, flying out to be at your son's graduation (my son serves in the U. S. Navy). I have laughed and cried, and more recently read and viewed the pictures of your newborn son, adoring how precious he is and knowing he's being born into a loving and strong family.

Having said all of that, Governor, this time you have missed the mark by a mile with your "unconditional support" of Joe Schmidt. All the good things you've done...have been undone in one fell swoop in my eyes. Everyone knows you went to high school together - so what are you saying? That all of these people are liars and have some ax to grind? I do not have family members who work in corrections - this is just plain old common sense. You seriously need to rethink your stance on this issue. Corrections is in a world of hurt. This man not only didn't ask for more money for corrections (that's fine), but he GAVE some BACK? And now you don't believe the people who have given him a no confidence vote? Come on!

I didn't even write to you when you cut the DPS budget by 1.2 million dollars, and I DO have a family member who serves this State as a State Trooper. That was bad enough...but this....this is just wrong and believe me, you need to seriously think about rectifying this situation, despite the fact that this jerk is your long time friend. Do the right thing. Practice what you preach, Governor.

The articles in the ADN served as a the touchstone for all this. Tuesday, Paradiso, whom I have not met, phoned me very angry about the possible negative effects of the articles, but I managed to explain things to him and calm him down a bit. Mike Navarre, as well as other members of the Executive Committee of Arctic Power conference called to Paradiso throughout the week and managed to get him back on board and everything seemed good to go until Friday. I believe the RadioAmerica people had a meeting on the issue late Thursday and, according to Franklin, personal grievances and simmering animosity between the two (Franklin being very much for the show to go on, Paradiso against it) led to Paradiso pulling Franklin as "punishment" as Franklin put it. After my phone calls and emails to Paradiso went unanswered to find out what was up Friday afternoon , I finally got notice at 5pm Friday.

Liddy,who is independent of the radio station can do what he wants but will not do anything without Franklin who is his right hand man. Franklin is in service to RadioAmerica and is not being allowed to deal with the matter. Franklin, was not talking to Paradiso last time I checked and stated to me he would resign his position for a week in order to produce the show with Liddy he felt so strongly about it. At any rate...things are not looking good.

I will keep you informed as things progress today....

I don't know that if Franklin was allowed to take time off (as he suggested) to do the show, if it would be allowed to go through....he was adamant that he was going to try and make this happen but, I have my doubts at this point whether he can.

The articles in the ADN served as a the touchstone for all this. Tuesday, Paradiso, whom I have not met, phoned me very angry about the possible negative effects of the articles, but I managed to explain things to him and calm him down a bit. Mike Navarre, as well as other members of the Executive Committee of Arctic Power conference called to Paradiso throughout the week and managed to get him back on board and everything seemed good to go until Friday. I believe the RadioAmerica people had a meeting on the issue late Thursday and, according to Franklin, personal grievances and simmering animosity between the two (Franklin being very much for the show to go on, Paradiso against it) led to Paradiso pulling Franklin as "punishment" as Franklin put it. After my phone calls and emails to Paradiso went unanswered to find out what was up Friday afternoon , I finally got notice at 5pm Friday.

Liddy,who is independent of the radio station can do what he wants but will not do anything without Franklin who is his right hand man. Franklin is in service to RadioAmerica and is not being allowed to deal with the matter. Franklin, was not talking to Paradiso last time I checked and stated to me he would resign his position for a week in order to produce the show with Liddy he felt so strongly about it. At any rate...things are not looking good.

I will keep you informed as things progress today....

I don't know that if Franklin was allowed to take time off (as he suggested) to do the show, if it would be allowed to go through....he was adamant that he was going to try and make this happen but, I have my doubts at this point whether he can.

all the best

The jetty rocks are slick and sharp. Sometimes they serve as a backdrop to family snapshots on the New England shore. Other times, they are a 6-foot hurdle, dividing the beach.

In either case, the woman scales them with surprising ease. Soon, we'll set out for the Cape Cod coastline and take a sunset walk by the sea.

Maybe this time she'll begin to tell me stories.

The school halls are virtually empty except for an 11-year-old blond girl gingerly making her way up a set of stairs in a Maple Heights, Ohio, school. She reaches the landing and begins walking with a slight limp she hopes is covered by loose clothing.

She's late for class. Her arrival draws stares from seventh-grade classmates and silence from teachers who must wait for the girl to take her seat.

That's her, they think. That's the girl who had polio.

The year is 1953. The girl has returned to school after fighting off a bout with the neurological virus that struck fear in North Americans during the '40s and '50s. Polio left many of its victims paralyzed for weeks, months, sometimes permanently.

Undaunted by weeks of her own paralysis and months of physical therapy, the girl is back in class walking unaided; still, she wishes she had had anything but polio. If that were the case, the boy whose locker is next to hers would not run in a panic, leaving his books behind.

She refuses to skip any of her classes, including physical education. Softball is her favorite sport. She must hit a line drive to deep center field to reach first base, but she gets there. To her, it's just as good as hitting a home run. But the gym teacher asks the girl whether she can't run any faster.

Embarrassed, she tells her teacher no, then wonders: Isn't it enough that she got this far on her own?

My mother, Stephanie Ann Backman, was that girl. As an adult, she became my hero, my role model and my antagonist.

Now she is 59, and the drive and resolve of this 5-foot-2, 103-pound woman are still that of the 11-year-old girl pushing herself toward first base. But the physical means that fuel her ambition are slipping away.

Mom has post-polio syndrome, a menacing term that means that the virus may be gone, but its effects are reappearing decades later at an unpredictable pace.

Symptoms she thought had healed have returned and so have a few new conditions: muscle fatigue, weakness, pain, numbness, failing posture toward day's end, an inexplicable failure to do simple tasks such as holding out her arms palms up, then raising them past her shoulders.

Experts estimate there are at least 250,000 people with post-polio syndrome. Doctors often misdiagnose the condition or don't immediately recognize it because many of today's physicians didn't study polio in school.

The impact on my mom was this: Doctors at first weren't sure what was slowing her down; and then, once the diagnosis was made, they weren't sure how to treat her. No one knows what lies ahead.

My mother and I have always been close, but watching polio's late effects on her has brought me closer to her in ways I could have never predicted.

We talk more about everyday life as if we were friends. And when the time is right, we talk about polio. Discussions leave me wishing I were there more often to help, to ease her burden and what will be a growing burden on my stepfather.

Each trip to the East Coast reveals subtle changes in her condition. At times I want to be in the same room just to make sure she's OK. When I leave New England, I wonder what will change by my next visit.

I face the prospect of someday being my mother's caregiver. And my worries grow as I watch her become more vulnerable, watch her age faster than either of us expected.

The reversal in roles has already begun. As a psychotherapist accustomed to pushing people for their thoughts, Mom faces my questions about polio stories that she'd kept to herself.

I now know of that summer day in 1952 when Mom, known to friends and family as Penny, entered Metropolitan General Hospital screaming from the searing pain that ran through her body. She lost the use of her legs for the next three weeks.

I know of the day Penny repeatedly rang for the nurse to remove the bedpan. She had to get out of bed and remove it herself. The nurse finally arrived to find a girl hanging on the side of the bed.

We've always been communicative, but these days we talk far more than we ever have. Mostly, it's about the day-to-day: the Boston Red Sox's late-inning rallies, the Texas heat, our weekend plans.

Still, I call needing to know how she is doing, needing to understand what happened 50 years ago, what's happening now and why.

As I was growing up, Mom and I never discussed the polio. You couldn't really tell she'd had it: With the exception of a slight loss of posture while climbing stairs, she showed no signs of any neurological or muscular virus.

What I saw was an independent woman who refused assistance - and sometimes still does. Mom simply couldn't be stopped.

The subject of polio wasn't necessarily taboo. It just never came up. There were other immediate concerns while she raised two sons in an east-side Cleveland suburb.

She would worry about supporting a family, forced to move every two or three years, on a household income that was a handful of dollar bills over the food stamp threshold. I, on the other hand, would worry about making the varsity baseball team. She would wonder whether the child-support check would arrive on time and, if so, whether it would bounce. I would question my chances for getting a prom date.

It wasn't until five years ago that I became more aware of my mother's condition, when the effects of polio began sneaking back into her life.

Even today, the signs of polio range from to scant to stark. Her muscles respond one minute but fail to answer the call another. Bedtime can be as early as 11:30 p.m. This from a woman who thought it was a sin for adults to go to bed before midnight. To her, anything earlier is a waste of living.

I wince when I watch her climb stairs. With the first step, she loses her posture. She needs to crane her neck to see the landing. Still, I marvel at her blend of craziness and impatience when she decides to push 50-pound stones around her garden.

I get angry when she won't use any of her walking canes or when she tries to lift anything heavy, which for her can be a cast-iron skillet or a bag of groceries.

In the next six months, Mom, who has a healthy private practice in Portland, Maine, will spend time teaching in Australia and Sweden, perhaps with stops in other Scandinavian countries. Splitting time between Portland and Cape Cod, she'll log another 10,000 to 12,000 miles on the road this year.

But at what price? Mom's healthy muscles already have been overworked by compensating for other muscles affected by the virus. As with many polio survivors, she followed doctors' orders and her own ambition: She worked the muscles hard while pursuing a productive life.

Now she's being cheated out of aging naturally and confronting the prospects of being disabled again. She repeatedly asks the same unanswerable questions: What is the difference between old age and post-polio syndrome? At her age, is she supposed to be bent over like this? If she works hard all day, and she's tired, is that normal?

Still, Mom is in charge. Affectionately nicknamed "The Boss" by my stepfather, Mom still chides me and nurtures me. She keeps after me about my weight. She asks whether I've met a woman, perhaps someone who one day will be a member of the family. She asks whether I have enough money for my return trip to Dallas.

Somehow, I never get tired of hearing these questions.

As we wade through the water, captivated by the sea creatures leading a life oblivious to ours, I tease her for lifting a skirt a few inches so that it won't get wet. A clam shell catches our eyes; it has a strange, furry coat. We bend down for a closer look.

When it's time to stand up, I offer my hand.

This time, she takes it.
